I grew up in the West, so it's always fascinated me to see how

(what we were told anyway) the "evil Soviet empire" worked... We never really got this kind of information, so it's good to see how it was.

The Riga Bridge (Riia sild in Estonian) crosses the Velikaya River at Pskov, Russia. It forms part of the branch line from Valga to Tartu of Pskov-Riga Railway.

The bridge pillars were built in August 1886, construction of the bridge deck took place in July 1888 and the bridge was opened in May 1889.<sup>[1]</sup>

The bridge was partially destroyed during the battle for the Liberation of Pihva (Pskov) in May 1919 during the Russian Civil War. Estonian troops occupied the area and rebuilt the bridge in July 1919.<sup>[2]</sup>

RAILROADS

Forged from sweat, steam, and steel, the transcontinental railroads of the 19th century transfixied the American imagination. And they still shape our lives today, beyond the miles of track the railroads left behind. What exactly did it mean to live with the railroads? What does it mean today? Share your expertise and help us tease out the long-term influences of railroads throughout the American West. Collaborate and connect with other railfans over photos, employee records, or maps. Chances are, someone is also interested and knowledgeable. Build off community knowledge and share your own. The map is waiting -- will you stake your claim?
